Preface to the 1942 Record

Sixty years ago, in 1882, a small group of Wellesley graduates with faith in the continued growth of their college and a practical wisdom that anticipated the value of accurate records, formed the Wellesley Record Association and published the first Wellesley Record. The association constitution made it mandatory that each member furnish interesting information about herself and her friends every third year, and promised that the "intelligence received" would be duly recorded. The founders also had the temerity to state that the Record would be printed every three years, that anyone might become a life member by paying a fee of $2.00 and that each such member would receive a copy of the catalogues published.

That original Record listed in 35 pages the names of 145 students (members of the Record Association only), 15 departments of study, 37 former and 35 active Faculty members. Interesting to note is the fact that while 69 of those first Wellesley students catalogued came from the New England area, wide geographic distribution (still a source of pride and interest to Wellesley women) was indicated, with 26 listed from Illinois, 12 from New York, 6 from Ohio, 5 from Pennsylvania, 4 from Minnesota, 3 from New Jersey, 2 each from Wisconsin, Kentucky, Georgia, Michigan and solitary scholars from such widespread localities as Missouri, Texas, North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Oregon, Iowa, Hawaii, Nebraska and California.

The three-year interval between Record printings held through 1885 and 1888 with only the names of the Record Association members printed. In 1891 a far more ambitious effort was made to record names of "all former members of the Faculty and of all students ever connected with the College for any length of time." But the tremendous cost of this undertaking brought an end to the triennial publications.

In 1900, when the College had completed a quarter century of continual expansion, the time seemed fitting to prepare a complete catalogue of members of the College. The compilers at this time made it clear that their work was entirely without connection with the former Records issued, though in full sympathy with their spirit and purpose. Six thousand names and addresses made up this book. The next issue was in 1912 and from that time on, economy of both time and money necessitated a ten-year interval between volumes—although at intervals address registers were printed by the Alumnae Association. Throughout all these ventures, experiments in methods of recording were made. It is from the knowledge gleaned from these former publications and inquiry into the current practices of other colleges that this 1942 Record was planned. It comes to you as a 1000 page volume listing approximately 24,500 alumnae of whom 14,044 are graduates and 10,454 non-graduates. Included in these records are all graduate students, past Faculty members, the 192 members of the present Faculty representing 27 departments of study, 86 administrative officers, past and present Trustees. Geographic distribution of the present student body covers 42 states and 16 foreign countries and the biographical information demonstrates that Wellesley women hold responsible positions in practically every known field of endeavor. Thus to list all persons who have studied, taught or administered at Wellesley, their achievements and their continuing interest in their College, gives a significant picture of her growth and the vitality of her contribution to contemporary life.

The main section of this 1942 Record is a biographical directory arranged according to classes, an innovation this year. This is supplemented by a complete alphabetical index of former and present students whether graduates or not and a geographical index of all now living. The lists of non-graduates follow the lists of graduates of the class with whom they were affiliated when they entered College.

There is a separate division for alumnae of the Department of Hygiene and Physical Education (including graduates of the former Boston Normal School of Gymnastics). Another new section is devoted to Alumnae Relatives, listing in family groups all mothers, daughters, granddaughters and sisters who have attended the College.

In order to compile the 1942 Record, 18,500 questionnaires were mailed October 1, 1941. The original mailing plus one follow-up letter and postcard furnished the gratifying result of 12,500 returns. Careful searching of past files, inquiry into all available sources of material, class books, address files, Legendas and Class Notes have helped to secure as timely and accurate information as possible.

Material has been under constant correction until it went to press and marriages and changes of address have been recorded until the final proof was corrected. In these war days, when populations shift almost overnight it is obviously impossible to keep a constantly accurate record in a published volume. Alumnae are urged to keep the more flexible Alumnae Office records up to date.

Such a wealth of material was brought to our attention by these Record questionnaires that it is impossible to publish it in detail in one volume. All of it is being filed by classes in the permanent biographical files in the Alumnae Office and a thorough recording of all pertinent facts useful for sociological, Placement Office and publicity studies is being made on Hollerith punched cards and will be kept up to date.

The 1942 Record Committee, composed of a diverse and peculiarly interested group of graduates and administrative officers, wish to express profound gratitude to Elisabeth Patch, 1916, the indefatigable and resourceful editor of this volume, and her staff, for the excellence and completeness of this valuable document of Wellesley College in its 67th year.

Explanatory Notes

In the List of Students, the maiden name is given first, followed by the married name in parentheses and the address. Information about the individual is given in the following order: advanced degrees, certificates and diplomas, other study following graduation from Wellesley, date of marriage, husband's occupation and date of death, names and year of birth and death of children, number of grandchildren, present employment (in italics). Occasionally, where an avocation has been followed for some time, this is listed, and likewise overseas service. The † sign, followed by a number, refers to the same number in the Alumnae Relatives section.

Where no college is named for advanced degrees or HPE certificate, Wellesley is implied. When more than one degree has been received from a given institution, the name is not repeated. The year of the BA degree is given when it differs from the class with which the individual wishes to be affiliated. Years of enrollment are given for non-graduate and special students.

Information received from sources other than the individual concerned or from old records is enclosed in square brackets, and the address used is the one currently on file in the Alumnae Office. When the address is also included within the brackets, it signifies mail has been returned from that address by the Post Office.

Abbreviations follow in general the usage in "Who's Who in America." A list follows of those occurring most commonly in the RECORD, and another list of the abbreviations used for the names of colleges and universities. The customary abbreviations for state names are used. The state is omitted following names of cities and towns in Massachusetts and following Baltimore, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and San Francisco. NYC is used for New York City. The asterisk before a name signifies the individual is deceased.

The staff of the RECORD wishes to express its profound gratitude to Mrs. Helen E. Moore, in charge of the address files of the Alumnae Office, and to her staff, and likewise to the College Recorder, Miss Kathleen Elliott, and her staff. Without their constant helpfulness and coöperation, compilation of the 1942 RECORD would have been impossible.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

Adapted from the current catalogue of the Wellesley College Bulletin

WELLESLEY COLLEGE is one of that group of women's colleges established in the nineteenth century to offer to young women the educational opportunities "equivalent to those usually provided in colleges for young men." The motive of its founder, Henry Fowle Durant, was, however, something more than the enrichment of the experience of young women for their own sake. Addressing the first students in the fall of 1875 he said, "You mistake altogether the significance of the movement of which you are a part if you think this is simply a question of a college education for girls. I believe that God's hand is in it; . . . that He is calling to womanhood to come up higher, to prepare herself for great conflicts, for vast reforms in social life, for noblest usefulness."

To the end of preparing women for positions of responsibility, Mr. Durant insisted from the beginning on the maintenance of high academic standards, and of healthy community life in beautiful surroundings. He built an impressive College Hall on his own spacious estate fourteen miles west of Boston, and spared no pains to make his gift contribute to the aesthetic development of students. He began to beautify the four hundred acre campus which has become one of Wellesley's distinctive assets. He encouraged the inclusion in the student body of representatives from all parts of the country and from foreign lands. He placed more emphasis on personal quality than on the accident of economic status, and he maintained a real democracy within the college family. He opened unusual professional opportunities to women on the faculty. He introduced laboratory work in science before it was widely recognized as academically necessary. He recognized the significance of the arts in education and encouraged "learning by doing." He assumed that religion was a normal part of the life of educated people and made provision for its study and expression in the program of the new community.

From the beginning the Board of Trustees has been composed of men and women whose interests have been far-reaching in New England and around the world. The first board included the President of Yale College, Chancellor of the University of the City of New York, Dean of the Episcopal Theological School of Harvard University, President of Boston University, a professor of the Rochester Theological Seminary and of Andover Theological Seminary, two pastors, and a former Governor of Massachusetts. The roster has been continuously noteworthy for the calibre of the persons who have contributed of their time, their professional experience, their money to strengthen the College. The present board includes educators as well as financiers, lawyers, an architect, a doctor, businessmen—men and women of wide cultural interests selected for their expert contribution. It is a working board. Three of its regular members are nominated by vote of the Alumnae Association. An unusual feature of organization is the membership of a "faculty trustee" who is not a member of the faculty but is nominated by the Academic Council.

The history of the College falls into two fairly distinct periods, pre- and post-College Hall Fire. The College was chartered on March 17, 1870, but the planning of the program and the construction of College Hall required five years of effort and the opening did not occur until September, 1875. In a surprisingly short period, under the leadership of President Ada Howard (1875–1881) and Alice Freeman (1881–1887), the institution became established as a well-known college. It borrowed ideas and methods from various institutions, notably Mount Holyoke Seminary's program of domestic work for each student. It drew heavily on Harvard University resources but at once assumed responsibility for copying nothing blindly and for introducing a type of instruction which put much initiative upon students.

During the presidencies of Helen Shafer (1887–1894) and Julia Irvine (1894–99) the present curriculum of the College took shape and the experimental venture in higher education for women became established as a permanent part of the educational scene. President Caroline Hazard (1899–1910) brought to the academically mature College the graciousness of the artist. Music, art, gracious living were re-emphasized as important factors in a community of educated people.

On the night of March 17, 1914, College Hall burned to the ground. The orderly evacuation of the building with no injury to any occupant won world-wide fame for the already well-known College. In the emergency created by this catastrophe President Ellen Fitz Pendleton (1911–1936) came to the position of leadership which made her indeed the builder which she will always be in the grateful memory of Wellesley women. Within twenty-five years the College grew from an inadequately housed, financially handicapped institution to a beautifully equipped and well-endowed college. More significantly, Miss Pendleton guided the reorganization of the faculty into a democratically controlled policy-making body which worked consistently to maintain and develop a vital curriculum and community life. She assisted in the formation of a vigorous Alumnae Association and presided over the magnificent efforts of the trustees and alumnae to raise enough money to rebuild, expand, and endow the College.

During the very years of Wellesley's urgent need, the efforts of all its members were directed to the war service of four overseas units. Wellesley is no "ivory tower" to which people withdraw from contact with world needs. Her thirteen thousand alumnae, engaged in every kind of responsible task, prove that fact. The register of graduates lists Wellesley women living in each of the forty-eight states of the United States of America and in forty-eight foreign lands.

Since the appointment in 1936 of Mildred H. McAfee as President, the Administration has been strengthened by the creation of the offices of Dean of Instruction and Dean of Students to replace the office of Dean of the College. Attention has been focussed on the needs of the Library, the Recreation Building has been opened, the Anna L. Page Memorial School has become a part of the College and the new Infirmary a reality. Every undergraduate senses the quality of President McAfee's leadership, and officers of administration and faculty alike find her a vigorous impartial executive.

Through the years the external aspects of Wellesley College have changed almost completely. It started with three hundred students, most of them in a preparatory department which was a part of the College until 1879. It has become a college for fifteen hundred students, with fifty or sixty graduate students. Starting with one building, it now has forty-seven. It began with Mr. Durant's private library of less than 10,000 volumes. Its present library has outgrown the building designed to accommodate 135,000 volumes and has over 200,000 spread over the campus in a series of departmental units. Its one gymnasium room has been replaced by two large buildings to provide instructional and recreational facilities for the Graduate Department of Hygiene and Physical Education as well as the enlarged undergraduate group.

Through the years the methods of the founder and his wife have changed to meet new conditions, modified under the leadership of a distinguished group of men and women, but the fundamental purposes continue to direct the modern Wellesley which still uses Mr. Durant's chosen motto, "Non ministrari sed ministrare."

THE COLLEGE COMMUNITY

THE DEANS are the officers most directly concerned with the organization of the academic community. In addition to the Dean of Instruction, the Dean of Students, and the Dean of Residence, there is a dean for each class. The Dean of Freshmen is ex officio chairman of the Board of Admission and is, therefore, in a favored position to help entering students take their places in the life of the College. At the beginning of the sophomore year, each class is assigned to a member of the teaching staff who is relieved from some duties in order to assume responsibility as the academic adviser for the class during its last three undergraduate years. The Dean of Students is chairman of the class deans and is especially responsible for the interpretation of educational policy to the students. The Dean of Instruction is in charge of those matters of educational policy and administration which relate especially to the faculty.

HALLS OF RESIDENCE are maintained for all undergraduates except those within commuting distance who prefer to live at home. A Head of House presides over each residence and coöperates with the student officers to develop the house group as a congenial social unit. Most of the campus halls have resident faculty members, and other members of the faculty are frequently entertained in the houses by students. There are eight freshman houses. Six of these are in the village, not far from the campus, and accommodate approximately half the entering class. Each freshman house has a freshman chairman with a junior as her adviser. In each of the other campus houses, members of at least three classes are in residence. Rooms are assigned to new students in the order in which their original application fees have been received. Students in residence at the time of the spring room-drawing choose their rooms in the order of choice determined by lot within each class.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES are held daily in the College Chapel. On week days these are conducted by some member of the faculty, except on Thursday when a member of the senior class is the leader. The Sunday morning services are led by visiting clergymen of many denominations. In all these services the college choir, led by a member of the department of Music, participates; and, in addition, there are a number of special musical vesper services during the year. The Christian Association conducts a varied program of religious discussions and conferences, and its officers direct numerous service agencies in the neighborhood of Wellesley in which many students participate. The Christian Association coöperates with the Student Christian Movement and is an important link between Wellesley students and those of other colleges in this country and abroad. The Newman Club and various denominational groups are significant assets to the religious life of the campus. The Wellesley College Service Fund is administered by a special committee of faculty and students which raises and distributes funds for educational and philanthropic agencies. The largest item in its budget is the annual contribution to Yenching University in China.

THE HEALTH SERVICE is directed by the college physicians in coöperation with the department of Hygiene and Physical Education. The medical staff includes four physicians, one of whom is a psychiatrist. One of the physicians is available for visits to student houses, and a clinic is open without charge to all students at Simpson Infirmary, where nine trained nurses are in constant attendance. The proximity of the College to Boston permits frequent conference with other doctors, and early consultation in case of serious illness is assured. Hospitals in Boston and Newton are so accessible that immediate care can be given to any type of illness or accident. In case of serious illness, parents are notified by telephone or telegram. Seven days of infirmary care are provided without charge to the student.

Emphasis is laid on preventive medicine and on the maintenance of healthful living conditions on the campus. A board of health, consisting of the college physicians, together with the Director of the Department of Hygiene and Physical Education, the President, and the Deans, considers matters affecting the health of students. Campus employees are examined by a college physician, and the doctors coöperate with the dietitian and purveyor in the selection of food.

The Placement Office, established by the Founders of the College as the Teachers' Registry, includes in its scope the placing of graduates in teaching and in business positions, the supplying of information about training courses, apprenticeships, and assistantships, the arranging of lectures and discussions on occupations. Registration for placement is open to all who have taken courses in Wellesley College. Students are invited to register during their senior year but the office is open for conference and advice to all students. The office maintains files, collects credentials, and is the source of information concerning the vocational equipment and experience of Wellesley women. The registration fee is $2.00 for life membership, and no commission is charged for placement. The office also registers undergraduates and alumnae for summer work, and has charge of undergraduate employment.

The staff of the Placement Office consists of a Director, two Appointment Secretaries, a Consultant from the Psychology department, and three assistants. This staff is in active coöperation with other administrative offices by means of the Personnel Board. The Board is composed of the Deans, the Physicians, the executive staffs of the Placement Office and other offices concerned especially with student counseling, and at least one member of the faculty who has no administrative responsibility. Meetings are held from time to time under the chairmanship of the President of the College for the consideration of personnel questions and methods of procedure, to which any officers of the College concerned with the matter under discussion are invited.

The College Government Association is responsible for the maintenance of efficient organization of the undergraduate community. It is directed largely by students, though it receives its charter from the Academic Council of the Faculty, which has representatives on its governing boards. Other student organizations foster a variety of interests: the Athletic Association; the Barnswallows (dramatic) Association; the Christian Association; the Forum, which is a federation of such organizations as the International Relations Club and the Domestic Affairs Club; the Cosmopolitan Club; the Poetry Club; and numerous departmental clubs. There are six societies which combine informal social events with extra-curricular study. Each society has a small house containing clubrooms and kitchen facilities. The membership in each group is limited to thirty-five juniors and seniors, and the alumnae members maintain an active interest.

EQUIPMENT

Academic and Community Buildings

(Listed in order of construction)

College Hall, the first academic building of Wellesley College, was the gift of the founders, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fowle Durant. In 1875 it was finished and equipped under the close personal supervision of the founders. On March 17, 1914, all but one wing of this historic building was destroyed by fire. That wing, in constant use since 1914, was remodeled in 1936 and houses the department of Geology and Geography. It is located on the hill overlooking Lake Waban.

Music Hall and Billings Hall are large brick buildings devoted to the department of Music. Music Hall, built in 1880, contains offices, practice studios, and listening rooms, and includes in its equipment thirty-seven pianos, five victrolas, and a two-manual organ. The ground floor of Billings Hall (opened in 1904) is given over to the department offices, two classrooms, and a small auditorium. These are equipped with six pianos, a clavichord, a three-manual organ, two specially built phonographs of rare fidelity in reproduction, and apparatus for the projection of music on a large illuminated screen. The second floor is occupied by the Music Library and the office of the Research Librarian in Music.

The Music Library contains 4,100 scores, 3,100 reference books on musical subjects, and 1,575 victrola records, and includes as well a collection of musical manuscripts which is part of the Hazard Collection now housed in the treasure room of the main library.

The department has at its disposal the assignment to students of eight tickets for the weekly concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall, Boston.

Simpson Infirmary, a brick building erected in 1881, was used as a residence hall until 1908. Since that time it has served as an infirmary with some twenty beds, a well-equipped clinic, and offices for the medical staff.

In February, 1942, construction on a new wing designed by Coolidge, Shepley, Bulfinch and Abbott was completed. Connected with Simpson Infirmary it not only doubles the number of beds but provides space for a much larger clinic and additional technical facilities. The present infirmary will be renovated to provide living quarters for the Resident Physician and nurses.

The Farnsworth Art Building was the gift of the late Isaac D. Farnsworth in 1889. It contains lecture rooms and exhibition galleries and is used by the department of Art for its library, study rooms, laboratories and studios.

Through the active interest of friends of the College, the Museum contains a small but representative selection of monuments from different periods and styles: Egyptian minor arts, including 16 scarabs and a seal from the Murch collection; the M. Day Kimball collection of classical sculpture; Græco-Buddhist stucco sculpture from Kashmir; a recently excavated mosaic from Antioch; a few Italian primitives; a 16th century tapestry; the James J. Jarves collection of textiles and laces; a bronze by Kolbe; an early Corot; a late Renoir; a small painting by Francesco Furini; the Cumæan Sibyl by Elihu Vedder; two paintings by Frank Duveneck; a portrait study by Whistler; and two miniatures by Artemis Tavshanjian.

The Chapel was presented in 1899 by Miss Elizabeth G. Houghton and Mr. Clement S. Houghton as a memorial to their father, Mr. William S. Houghton, a trustee of the College from 1880 to his death in 1894. Its windows include memorials to the Founder of the College and to various alumnae and members of the faculty. Behind the memorial tablet (by Daniel Chester French) in honor of Alice Freeman Palmer are the urns holding her ashes and those of her husband, Professor George Herbert Palmer, trustee of Wellesley College from 1912 to 1933. The three-manual, Aeolian-Skinner organ of ninety-one stops was built under the direction of Mr. G. Donald Harrison and was dedicated in the fall of 1936.

The Whitin Observatory is a one-story building of brick, faced with white marble, situated on a small hill on the college grounds and devoted entirely to the use of the department of Astronomy.

THE OBSERVATORY HOUSE, the residence of the Director of the Observatory, is nearby. The Observatory, the House, and much of the astronomical equipment are gifts of the late Mrs. John C. Whitin.

MARY HEMENWAY HALL, on the western border of the campus, was erected in 1909 as headquarters of the department of Hygiene and Physical Education when the Boston Normal School of Gymnastics became a part of Wellesley College.

THE LIBRARY of the College, endowed by Eben Norton Horsford, now numbers over 204,161 bound volumes, including the departmental libraries. The books in the General Library building form a collection chosen primarily for the use of students and instructors in the college courses in Literature and Languages, History, Economics, Sociology, Philosophy, Education, Religious History, and certain of the sciences. The General Library is open on week days from 8:10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., and on Sundays from 2:30 to 9:30 p.m. Students have direct access to the shelves. The Library is catalogued by author and subject entries, and the most recent and useful bibliographical aids are provided. Special effort is made to train students in methods of research.

The Library subscribes for more than six hundred American and foreign periodicals, including daily newspapers representing different sections of the United States, besides representative British and Continental dailies.

The Library has also many special collections of great interest and value to the student doing graduate or other research work. Among the most valuable of these are the Plimpton Collection, established by Mr. George A. Plimpton in memory of his wife, Frances Pearsons Plimpton, of the class of 1884, which comprises over a thousand volumes of Italian books and manuscripts chiefly of the Renaissance; the Ruskin Collection, the gift of Mr. Charles E. Goodspeed; and the Collection of Early and Rare Editions of English Poetry given for the most part by Professor George Herbert Palmer.

The Brooks Memorial Room, opened in 1921, provides comfortable and beautiful surroundings with carefully selected books for leisure hours of reading.

The following departmental libraries are located in the buildings of the respective departments: Art, Astronomy, Botany, Chemistry, Geology, Hygiene, Music, Physics, Psychology, and Zoölogy.

THE PAGE MEMORIAL SCHOOL on the college campus has two small buildings and is devoted to the education of young children.

FOUNDERS HALL, a building for lecture rooms and department offices pertaining to instruction in the liberal arts, was opened for use in 1919. The hall was built from the Restoration Fund, secured for the College through trustees, faculty, alumnae, and other friends, and replaces in some part College Hall, the first and main building of the College. The building is dedicated as a memorial to the Founders of the College, Henry Fowle Durant and his wife, Pauline Adeline Durant.

ALUMNAE HALL, built in 1923 as the gift of the alumnae for a recreation center, contains an auditorium seating 1,570, a ballroom, a library, committee rooms for the use of alumnae and students, and full equipment for entertaining. There is also a recreation room, known as "The Well," which contains a soda fountain, tables for light refreshments, and a nickelodeon.

SAGE HALL was built to house the departments of Botany and Zoölogy and Physiology. The first unit for the department of Botany was erected in 1927, and the Zoölogy and Physiology unit in 1931. The principal donor was Mrs. Russell Sage.

HETTY H. R. GREEN HALL, the administration building, was in large part the gift of Mrs. Green's son and daughter, Colonel Edward H. R. Green and Mrs. Matthew A. Wilks. It contains the administrative offices, class and seminar rooms, the faculty assembly hall, and offices of student organizations. The Galen L. Stone Tower, named for its donor, contains a carillon which was the gift of Mrs. Charlotte Nichols Greene.

PENDLETON HALL was opened in 1935. It was named at the request of the undergraduates in honor of Ellen Fitz Pendleton, President of the College from 1911 to 1936. This fire-proof building houses the departments of Chemistry, Physics, and Psychology.

THE RECREATION BUILDING, containing the GEORGE HOWE DAVENPORT SWIMMING POOL, was opened in March, 1939. It is the gift of many donors, two of whom, Mr. and Mrs. Davenport, gave large sums. Students and alumnae gave generously to increase the "Swimming Pool Fund" which accumulated for nearly thirty years. This building serves as a recreation center for students, faculty, administration, alumnae, and their guests.

RESIDENCES

The college residences are grouped into several units on and off the campus. In all houses the rooms are provided with the necessary furniture, including rugs and desk lamps.

The Hazard Quadrangle consists of four houses having approximately 88 students in each: Beebe, Cazenove, Pomeroy, and Shafer Halls.

The Tower Court group receives its name from the largest of its three buildings (which accommodates 216) and includes, also, Claflin Hall (with 95 students) and Severence Hall (with 125).

Stone and Olive Davis Halls form one building, though each half is operated as an independent unit for 80 students.

Norumbega Hall (with 54 students) is centrally located on the hill with Green, Founders, and Pendleton Halls, and the Farnsworth Art Building.

Munger Hall was built in 1935 as a coöperative house to accommodate 114 students.

Dower House and Homestead are campus residences, each accommodating about 35 freshmen who take their meals at Olive Davis Hall.

Six houses in the village—Crofton, Eliot, Elms, Washington, Little, and Noanett—form a residence unit for approximately 200 freshmen. Freshmen no longer live in private houses in the village, and 198 are in campus residences.

Fiske House, the Graduate Club House, accommodating about 25, is the social headquarters for all graduate students.

Horton, Shepard, and Hallowell Houses are club and apartment houses for members of the faculty. They are located in close proximity to the campus.

The President's House, Oakwoods (the home of the Dean of Students), Crawford (the home of the Dean of Residence), and Observatory House (the home of the Director of the Observatory), are on the campus.

Each of the larger student residences contains several faculty apartments.

Students

All students are listed alphabetically by maiden names with their classes; a student who received her degree in one year but who is affiliated socially with a different class is listed with both classes. There are separate sections for undergraduates in 1941–42; for holders of the M.A. degree; for special, graduate and unclassified students; and for holders of the certificate of the Department of Hygiene and Physical Education (including graduates of the Boston Normal School of Gymnastics).
